Like Father, Like Child: Social Reproduction in the French Grandes Écoles throughout the 20th Century (Job Market Paper)

Available: <https://amubox.univ-amu.fr/s/WJN9nezWHboQD88>

Educational systems expanded over the 20th century in developed countries, and while most scholars found that it promoted social mobility, some argue that the top of the social hierarchy remains shielded over generations. In France, the most prestigious Grandes Écoles are elite institutions for higher education. They constitute the main pathway to top positions in the public and private sectors. The present work provides the first results on intergenerational social reproduction in these schools over more than a century. We construct an exhaustive nominative dataset of 224,264 graduate students from ten of the leading Grandes Écoles, spanning over five cohorts born between 1866 and 1995. We develop a new methodology within the literature using surnames to track lineages and find that families from ancient aristocratic lineage, Parisians, as well as descendants of graduates are highly over-represented in the top Grandes Écoles, throughout the 20th century. Across cohorts, children of Grandes Écoles' graduates are 72 to 154 times more likely to be admitted, and up to 450 times to the exact same school than their father. This advantage appears remarkably stable for all cohorts born since 1916 and persists across multiple generations, emphasizing the existence of a “glass floor” for the French elites.

The (Market) Value of State Awards, joint with R. Coulomb and M. Sangnier

Available: <https://amubox.univ-amu.fr/s/9JT7XbSDaKjN4aD>

State awards to civilians are a widespread social phenomenon across space and time. This paper quantifies the impact of State awards given to directors on the stock value of their firms. We link a comprehensive dataset of recipients of the Légion d'honneur—the most prestigious official award in France—over the 1995–2019 period to board positions in French listed firms. We document large abnormal returns in the stocks of recipients' firms at the date of the award, suggesting that awards signal valuable access to policy-makers. This interpretation is corroborated by the absence of any market reaction for recipients who are identified before award receipt as being close to the government.

Political and Business Dynasties in France

Available: <https://amubox.univ-amu.fr/s/i5bndpgzJLrjXFv>

Dynasties constitute a visible sign of intergenerational persistence and raise questions on the legitimacy of the ruling elite. This paper quantifies the degree of intergenerational reproduction in the French political and business elites, defined as politicians with national-level mandates and board members of French firms. We link nominative data on 103,309 graduates from 12 French Grandes Écoles—prestigious higher education institutions—born between 1931 and 1975 to their professional careers in politics and business between 1958 and 2019. Identifying familial lineage through shared surnames, we find that children of political and business leaders had higher chances than their peers to embrace careers in the elite. Political dynasties were particularly sizeable, although progressively declining. We show that these dynasties also affect the composition of the French elite. Indeed, dynastical board members are less educated than first-generation directors, and members of the elite manage to propel their offspring much younger to top business and political positions.
